- b. Sponsor: The Department of Economics.

2. Rational

As part of the changes involved in the Department's participation in the Association of American Colleges' Reforming the Major Project, the intent is to make this applied course (Regional Economics of Southern New Jersey) more accessible to nonmajors. Since fundamentals of the market are taught in both the 2204.101 An Introduction to Economics-A Macroeconomic, Perspective and 2204.102 An Introduction to Economics-A Microeconomic Perspective courses and since needed microeconomic and macroeconomic topics are taught in the 2204.340 Regional Economics of Southern New Jersey course itself, either one of the introductory courses should provide the necessary background for successful completion of the course. Consequently, a student who has passed either 2204.101 An Introduction to Economics-A Macroeconomic Perspective or 2204.102 An Introduction to Economics-A Microeconomic Perspective should be allowed to enroll in the course.
