Re: Departmental Name Change from Department of Physical Sciences to Department of Chemistry and Physics
Date: October 4, 1991

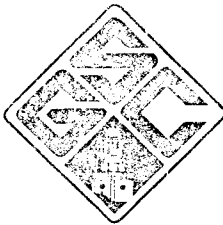

When the presently constituted science departments were created twenty years ago, the designation of "Department of Physical Sciences" seemed reasonable to us. The department's membership was approximately evenly divided between chemists, physicists, and geologists. The title, however, has proved to be ambiguous and has sometimes hidden the existence of our programs.

Consultants that reviewed the "Physical Sciences" degree in 1986 and 1991 both recommended that the departmental name be changed to more clearly reveal its membership. Recent retirements within our department have left us with no full-time geologists. Since our most pressing need is for another physicist, it is unlikely there will be a geology replacement. This will force us to eliminate all or most of the geology courses we had offered.

In order to more clearly reflect the disciplines represented by our departmental faculty and the courses offered, we wish to change the name of our department from the "Department of Physical Sciences" to the "Department of Chemistry and Physics." The change was unanimously endorsed by our faculty at a department meeting held on September 18, 1991.

Attached is a letter from the Acting Dean of Liberal Arts and Sciences supporting this proposed change.
